41. IF YOU DO NOT ATTEND RELIGIOUS SERVICES REGULARLY:

Some observers maintain that few people are actually abandoning their religious traditions. Rather, they draw selective beliefs and practices, even if they do not attend services frequently. They are not about to be recruited by other religious groups. Their identification with their religious tradition is fairly solidly fixed, and it is to these groups that they will turn when confronted with marriage, death and, frequently, birth.

APPENDIX A

PROJECT CANADA SURVEY SERIES

Methodology

The Project Canada Research Program has been carried out from The University of Lethbridge under the direction of Dr. Reginald Bibby. National surveys of adults 18 and over have been conducted in 1975, 1980, 1985, 1990, 1995, 2000, and 2005, with complementary surveys of youth in 1984, 1992, 2000, and 2008. Further, in 2015 and 2016, additional adult and youth surveys were completed on-line in partnership with Angus Reid.

THE ADULT SURVEYS

Data Collection. The first seven adult surveys made use of self-administered questionnaires and were conducted by mail over approximately four-month periods. Questionnaires ranged from eleven to twenty pages in length and included 300 to 400 variables. The goal was to generate extensive information on life in Canada, with specific attention given to social issues, intergroup relations, and religion. With minor variations, the procedures involved (1) mailing the questionnaire with a front-page cover letter, (2) sending a follow-up postcard, and (3) mailing a second questionnaire.

Sampling. A representative sample of about 1,100 cases is sufficient to claim a confidence level of 95% and a confidence interval of four percentage points when generalizing to the Canadian adult population. Size and representativeness are the two key criteria in being able to generalize with accuracy from a sample to a population. Considerable care therefore was taken to ensure that both standards were met.

Concerning size, an interest in provincial comparisons resulted in 1,917 cases being gathered in 1975; 1,482 in 1980, 1,630 in 1985, 1,472 in 1990, 1,765 in 1995, 1,729 in 2000, and 2,400 in 2005. With respect to representativeness, the national population was stratified by province (ten) and community size (>100,000, 99-10,000, <10,000), with the sample drawn proportionate to the populations involved. As resources improved, the number of communities drawn increased from 30 in 1975 to 43 in 1980, 104 in 1985, 145 in 1990, 228 in 1995, 304 in 2000, and 355 in 2005. Participants were randomly selected using telephone directories. Discrepancies between the sample and population characteristics were corrected by weighting for provincial and community size, along with gender and age. Each of the seven samples was weighted down to about twelve hundred cases in order to minimize the use of large weight factors (i.e., three or more).

As can be seen in Table 1, all of the samples were highly representative of the Canadian population. Samples of this size and composition, as noted, should be accurate within about four percentage points on most questionnaire items, 19 times in 20 similar surveys. Comparisons with similar Gallup poll items, for example, have consistently found this to be the case.

The Panels. A major interest of the ongoing national surveys has been to monitor social change and stability. Each survey sample from 1980 through 2005 consisted of (a) a core of people who participated in the previous survey and (b) new participants, who were used to create a full national sample of about 1,500 cases. For example, while the first 1975 survey was a typical cross-sectional survey with 1,917 participants, the Project Can80 sample of 1,482 people included 1,056 who had also been involved in 1975 (for details, see Table 2).

Various panels can be constructed from the surveys according to the five-year interval desired (e.g., 1975-85, 1980-90, 1975-2005). While no claim is being made that these panels are representative of all Canadians, they do provide intriguing and novel data on the attitudes, outlooks, and behaviour of a core of Canadians over the last quarter of the twentieth century. The panels can be weighted as deemed necessary by data users.

Return Rates. For national surveys, the Project Canada return rates have been relatively high – 52% in 1975, 65% in 1980, about 60% in 1985, 1990, 1995, and around 50% in 2000 and 2005. We tended to hear from about 65% of the people who had participated previously and 50% to 40% of those we had contacted for the first time. The drop-off was particularly apparent among people under the age of 35.

Funding. The 1975 survey was carried out at a cost of about $14,000 and had four major sources: the United Church of Canada ($2,000), the CBC ($3,000), the Solicitor General of Canada ($5,000), and the University of Lethbridge ($4,000). In 1980, the panel portion of the survey was made possible by grants from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada ($10,000) and the United Church of Canada ($2,000). The second phase of Project Can80, which involved filling the core out into a full national sample, cost approximately $8,000 and was funded primarily by the University of Lethbridge. Project Can85 was funded completely by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada ($45,000), Project Can90, Project Can95, Project Canada 2000, and Project Canada 2005 were all funded by the Lilly Endowment (about $65,000 each). A contract for analysis of pertinent findings for the Secretary of State helped to make Project Teen Canada 84 possible, while the Project Teen Canada surveys in 1992, 2000, and 2008 were all funded by the Lilly Endowment and its Louisville Institute funding arm (some $50,000 each). PC 2005 and PTC 2008 received supplementary funding from two Alberta government departments that requested an oversampling of adult and teens in the province and additional, Alberta-specific reports.

Project Canada 2005 Methodological Summary

1. Background

- The 2005 survey was the seventh in the Project Canada national adult surveys. It was carried out by mail between approximately July 15th and December 15th of 2005. Reginald W. Bibby was the principal investigator, assisted by Project Manager Reggie Gordon Bibby, Jr., Jim Savoy, and a number of student research assistants.
- The initial Project Canada 2005 sampling frame consisted of a list of 1,729 people who had participated in one or more of the six previous Project Canada adult surveys (1975 through 2000). Previous experiences suggested that as many as 50% of these individuals (about 900) would participate once again. To produce an eventual participating sample of at least 1,500 cases, this core was supplemented with an initial new sample of some 1,500 people and a projected 500 participants, resulting in a total 2005 sample of around 1,500 people.
- In addition, to facilitate comparisons with Alberta in the province's centennial year, Alberta was oversampled to bring its total to around 600 people permitting generalizations within about +/- four points, 19 times in 20. This involved adding about 400 people beyond the 232 Albertans who had participated in Project Canada 2000 and selecting some 1200 additional people from the province.
- The funding for the survey was provided by the Louisville Institute (Lilly Endowment), along with Alberta Children's Services.
- Our projections were reasonably accurate: the total number of 2005 participants consisted of 2,400 people, including 655 Albertans. With oversampling compressed, the Alberta sample is an appropriate 160 (10%), and the total national sample 1,600.

2. The Questionnaire

- As with the earlier Project Canada surveys, the 2005 questionnaire was constructed to provide comprehensive data pertaining to three main subject areas being investigated: social issues, intergroup relations, and religion. In order to monitor change, many of the items earlier six were included in the questionnaire, with new items added to clarify the earlier findings as well as update the content more generally.
- Length: 20 pages; variables: about 400; completion time: 1-2 1/2 hours.

3. Sampling and Procedures

- In 1995, participants dating back to 1975 were pursued; this emphasis was repeated again in 2015 with the goal of including as many people as possible from the previous six surveys. That effort began in the spring of 2005 and continued throughout the project. It appears that some 1,300 of the "Project Canada 2000" respondents were located (about 75%).
- Based on previous survey experiences, a projected required supplemental sample of about 1,500 cases was drawn in the spring which, when combined with the core from 2000, would produce a final sample of adequate size and sufficient representativeness to permit high accuracy generalizations to the Canadian population (typically, about 25% cannot be located). As before, Canada was stratified by province and community size (>100,000, 99-10,000, <10,000), and the overall sample drawn proportionate to the national population, with 355 communities involved. Potential participants were randomly selected using telephone directories. As in the past, it was anticipated that weighting for provincial and community size, as well as gender would be required, with age weighting required since the ongoing cores would have aged anywhere from five to twenty-five years and also to correct for the growing underrepresentation of people under the age of 35. As just noted, a special oversampling of Albertans was undertaken, with the goal of producing some 625 participants from that province.

- Follow-up procedures were the same as used in 1980 through 2000. Approximately two to three weeks after the initial mailing, the pre-paid post-card—functioning as a reminder and asking about the status of the questionnaire—was sent, followed about three weeks later by a second copy of the questionnaire, with "Second Request" stamped on its cover letter. In the fall of 2000, participants were sent a thank-you post-card, informing them how the results were being disseminated, and welcoming further inquiries.
- A total of 692 people from 2000 and earlier (40% of those 1,729 participants) submitted usable questionnaires, as did 1,708 new individuals, resulting in a 2005 total sample of 2,400. The overall return rate was about 60%. Alberta's total came to 655, including an oversample of 337 people.

5. Representativeness

- These 2,400 cases have been weighted for provincial and community size, along with gender and age. In order to minimize the use of large weight factors, the sample again was reduced to 1,600 cases.
- So weighted, the sample is highly representative of the Canadian population (see Table 1). A representative sample of this size should be accurate within about four percentage points on most items, 19 times in 20 similar surveys.
- Likewise, Alberta's sample of 655 people weighted to 625 is highly representative of Albertans with a similar level of accuracy in generalizing to the province.(see p. 82). That weighted sample can be accessed by simply applying the weight "AWT"..
